Support Local Theatre the Easy Way

What is Kitchener-Waterloo Little Theatre?

The Kitchener Waterloo Little Theatre (KWLT) was established in 1935 as a place for people to try acting in an amateur format. It has continued uninterrupted since then, except for a pause during the Second World War. Philosophically, we see ourselves as an entry point to the theatre experience. Auditions are open to anyone and a large number of actors performing with KWLT in any given year are enjoying their first acting experience.

Why does Kitchener-Waterloo Little Theatre need money?

On July 19, 2002, our home, the Princess Street Building, burned down. KWLT now faces the challenge of continuing our productions and rebuilding our facilities. The rebuilding effort is volunteer driven and depends on hard work from many people. We are constantly looking to raise money to complete the work we have started.

What's the best way I can help?

There are many ways to help Kitchener-Waterloo Little Theatre – donating time, energy or money to our cause. For details on how to help us, see our website. However, perhaps the easiest way to help is to sign up to donate to us monthly.

What's so great about monthly donations?

Monthly donations help us plan. They let us make longer term decisions about the rebuild and about the sort of theatrical productions we can put on during a season. They also are an easy way for more people to help us – a donation of as little as five dollars a month helps build an income stream that we can depend on.

How can I set up my monthly donation?

We have partnered with CanadaHelps.org to take online donations from your credit card. They are a non-profit organization designed to help charities like us – they have the infrastructure and they handle the tax receipts, taking only a small percentage to cover the costs. This way, we can make sure that almost all of your money goes directly to support theatre in the Kitchener-Waterloo area, not to administration or server costs.
